Notes on his mother, Francis (Chamberlaine) Sheridan: autograph manuscript. / n.d.
Mr. Frances Child, alias Sheridan, of a very good English family—her maiden name Chamberlaine—her first literary effort was a little Pamphlet at the time of a violent Party dispute relative to the Theatre in which Mr. Sheridan had nearly embroiled the consequence was that Sheridan being introduced to Mr. Thurlow, and afterward sealed in their marriage.

Her first play, Sheridan, has written two comedies—the Deception, which was received with great favor. A woman of the most perfectly amiable character in every relation of life—after the most engaging manner, after some years of a weak state of health, she died in the south of France, 1767, aged 43.

Her Dramatic pieces are: The Discovery and The Duke; her both comedies of 4 Acts.
There is a great deal of laconic reproduction of an admirable work.

We are also the authors of Sydney Edelweiss, a novel in five volumes, which may be read with the first production of that class in one or any language. There is also a little romance in one volume called Nourished - in which...
